WHAT IS EFFECT OF PROHIBITION?

Question Raised in Congress Whether or Not It Increases Consumption.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)—Washington, D. C., March 7.—The last annual report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, showing that there has been a large increase both in production and consumption of intoxicating liquors during the year 1910, has raised an interesting question in the minds of Congress as to whether or not the prohibition of interstate and foreign commerce in liquor really tends to increase consumption.

The House Committee on a number of hearings concerning the question, many persons were brought before the committee and otherwise a large amount of data was closely examined.

Congressman James M. Miller, joint author of the Miller-Curtis bill in the House, was asked for his opinion on the subject before he went to his home in Kansas to-day. His statement is especially significant, not only because he is a member of the committee, but also because the State in which he resides has been the battleground of many hot liquor contests.

"It is not denied," Mr. Miller said, "that the amount of both distilled spirits and fermented liquors produced and consumed during the last fiscal year 1910, has increased over the amount for 1909. It is highly interesting to note, however, that there is a very material decrease in both the production and consumption of liquors in the revenue states, while the increase is largely in the license states where the demand for liquor prevails."

"It is important to notice, also, that while there is an increase in the amount of liquor consumed in the revenue states, there is a substantial decrease in consumption in the license states. This is particularly true when the fact is considered that the revenue states are those in which the prohibition of interstate and foreign commerce in liquor is maintained."

"During the fiscal year of 1910 there was the following decrease in the revenue states: Alabama, 176 gallons; Georgia, 3,725; Maine, Vermont and Oklahoma, 357; North Carolina, 21,160; Tennessee, 160,181."

"In contrast to these figures those in the license states are as follows: New York, increase, 2,100,791; Pennsylvania, 1,525,147; Illinois, 231,606."

"The reason being asked in what manner the prohibition of interstate and foreign commerce in liquor might be enabled to stop the interstate shipment of liquor, Mr. Miller said:

"As we view the problem, there are four possible ways in which the States may be given the necessary relief."

"1. Action such as is contemplated by the Miller-Curtis bill, which would attempt to remove an impediment to the interstate shipment of liquor by the prohibition of the sale of liquor to fall within the jurisdiction of the State in which it is consumed."

"2. Action by which interstate shipments of intoxicating liquors may be stopped altogether, as in the case of the prohibition of the sale of liquor to fall within the jurisdiction of the State in which it is consumed."

"3. Action forbidding partial interstate shipments of liquor, when consumption is wholly within the State."

"4. Action such as is contemplated by the Miller-Curtis bill, which would attempt to remove an impediment to the interstate shipment of liquor by the prohibition of the sale of liquor to fall within the jurisdiction of the State in which it is consumed."
